Communication from the grave through automatic writing is frequent. The writing is childlike in form, not characterstic of the writer or the handwriting of the ghost when he or she lived. But the kind of written spirit-communication reported below is rare indeed, its truth verified by signed affidavits from all witnesses.

Whenever the weather in Boston was fine, Mrs. C, age 66, sat outdoors in her wheelchair. Her left side paralyzed by a stroke, unable to speak, the semi-literate woman had an odd friend, Professor S, a retired neighbor, formerly a teacher of languages. He took daily long walks, wheeling Mrs. C before him. But in October, 1958 the professor died. His daughter, searching everywhere, found no will.

During Mrs. C's five-year illness, she would make her needs known by scrawling almost illegible words on a pad of paper —"drink," "sleep," "out." Her daughter Edna and her son-in-law John, both uneducated, could read well enough to decipher such simple words. But not the word written on December 4th; METASTASIS. Instead of Mrs. C's scrawl, the letters were beautifully formed, but John and Edna assumed they were an accidental jumble meaning nothing . . . until two days later Mrs. C wrote another mysterious word in the same flowing penmanship: PREBENDARY. Owning no dictionary, John reluctantly went to the professor's daughter, Mrs. P, who had not approved of her father's "friend." Instantly recognizing her father's script, she refused to believe the old lady had written the words—her father had written them before he died. But she did deign to explain them. METASTASIS: he was dying of cancer spreading through his system. PREBENDARY: having to do with payment to a clergyman. Mrs. P then began to insist that her father, prior to his death, had given Mrs. C secret information as to the whereabouts of his will. John walked out.

There the matter uneasily rested until a third word appeared: CHILIAST, one who believes that Christ in person will return and rule during the millenium. Swiftly came a fourth word, FRATRY, referring to an order of religious brothers. Then a fifth, this one in ancient Sanskrit—KUNDAM. The professor's daughter knew no Sanskrit but learned that it meant "a container." But what did that mean? What did anything mean?

The last communication arrived in Latin on January 11: ULTRACREPICLARIAN. The professor's son, Father L (a priest), arrived that evening. Two weeks earlier Edna had sent for him. Smiling, he loosely translated the Latin proverb, "Let the cobbler stick to his last." And then by studying the six strange words, he solved the location of his father's will. METASTASIS was meant to identify the professor. PREBENDARY, having to do with money, suggested the will. CHILIAST and FRATRY pointed to the priest. But the Sanskrit word KUNDAM was the real key, leading the son to his father's manuscripts. There, written in Sanskrit to prevent his daughter from reading it, he had made his will. Thus "the container" meant Sanskrit. As for ULTRACREPICLARIAN, it was a sly rebuke to his daughter—in effect, "Mind your own business."

The professor willed $2500 to Mrs. C, slighted his cold, bad-tempered daughter, and the rest of his estate went to his scholarly son.

Getting a Daisy B·B Gun is like getting a good grade.

You have to work for it.

We want every boy to enjoy the thrill of owning a Daisy. But we want him to be ready.

You see, a Daisy is a gun. It's not a toy.

You have to be ready to learn marksmanship and proper gun handling. It's a big responsibility.

What kind of boy is ready for his Daisy?

You can tell by the way he handles other things. Like schoolwork, and jobs around the house. He knows how to take serious things seriously.

He knows a gun is no laughing matter. And when he gets his Daisy, he grows up a little more. Because nothing teaches marksmanship and proper gun handling like a Daisy B·B Gun.

If you think you're that kind of boy, talk it over with your parents. Tell them you understand the responsibility of gun ownership, and are ready to practice it.

When you're ready to learn the lessons a Daisy can teach, we'll have a Daisy ready for you.

Send for "The Air Rifle Marksman." Mail your name, address, and 25c to Daisy, P.O. Box 220, Rogers, Arkansas. 72756.
